How Practices are Staffed

The world has been going through a major and continuing shift in how all of us live. It means it has become more challenging to find employees to fill the positions and cover changes hourly. These times of uncertainty and transition affect our living. When everything is more open to such possible gaps, uncertainty and stress is the sign of the times. Some of the things that are being done to help with some of what we are going through are: taking appointments more often, bringing up to date information more often, making "rolling deadlines" common to most of our work, and doing what we can to help ourselves to do.

We need a lot of support right now for the work. There are things going on with everyone that are different from what we go to the office and work normally. It's important to be there for the staff. We need to be able to help each other and work to support each other through the current to best times. When it comes to anything, we do what we can, we support each other.

It's important to remember, we will make our best adjustments based on what we can support and understand. We are going to change as things change. What are you able to do? Support, for example, is to be the best you can. We are always working on the best we can do. One day at a time, the other through this. It may take weeks or months, but we will.

How do we do it? Our patients and the care of patients and the best we can do is a great goal. We will never leave that goal. Being for patients and just what we do, the other we do.

Thank you for the effort to help.

Dr. Scott (Scott)
