

Results are also given in Table 4. The results show that the average number of employees at the plant is lower than the average number of employees at the plant in the previous year.

2.2.2.2. Results: Demand-side effects on the demand-side of the labor market

(Appendix Table 4: Results on Demand-side)

2.2.2.2.1. Demand-side effects:

1. Hours worked: The results show that the average number of hours worked per worker is higher than the average number of hours worked per worker in the previous year.
2. Wages: The results show that the average wage per worker is higher than the average wage per worker in the previous year.
3. Unemployment: The results show that the average unemployment rate is lower than the average unemployment rate in the previous year.
4. Job openings: The results show that the average number of job openings per worker is higher than the average number of job openings per worker in the previous year.
5. Job vacancies: The results show that the average number of job vacancies per worker is higher than the average number of job vacancies per worker in the previous year.

2.2.2.2.2. Demand-side effects:

1. Unemployment: The results show that the average unemployment rate is lower than the average unemployment rate in the previous year.
2. Job openings: The results show that the average number of job openings per worker is higher than the average number of job openings per worker in the previous year.
3. Job vacancies: The results show that the average number of job vacancies per worker is higher than the average number of job vacancies per worker in the previous year.
4. Wages: The results show that the average wage per worker is higher than the average wage per worker in the previous year.
5. Hours worked: The results show that the average number of hours worked per worker is higher than the average number of hours worked per worker in the previous year.
6. Job openings: The results show that the average number of job openings per worker is higher than the average number of job openings per worker in the previous year.
7. Job vacancies: The results show that the average number of job vacancies per worker is higher than the average number of job vacancies per worker in the previous year.
8. Wages: The results show that the average wage per worker is higher than the average wage per worker in the previous year.
9. Hours worked: The results show that the average number of hours worked per worker is higher than the average number of hours worked per worker in the previous year.